One Jailed When Officers Probe Red Propaganda

Carmel 'reds' and those with revolutionary tendencies were not expressing their views so loudly this week as the result of a county-wide investigation launched by District Attorney Harry Noland which caused the arrest of Lawrence Newell of Castroville.

Newell is facing a charge of criminal syndicalism following his arrest when a speech he made to a group of Filipinos was taken down in shorthand by operatives from the district attorney's office. Two boys, also from Castroville who were with Newell admitted that they had been peddling papers carrying red propaganda. The boys were released.

Newell's speech as taken down in shorthand reveals that he said to the mass of people he was addressing: "We have spies in every branch of the United States—aerial forces. We got harbors, ammunition—everything. I want all of you in the organization. I belong to the socialist government of the whole world. I carry the red flag wherever I go, and until that flag flies in place of the American flag Americans will not be free."

"By April 1st we are going to have a revolution. We may have to take guns on our shoulders and fight to get what rightfully belongs to us."

District Attorney Noland indicated that Newell was associated with several Carmel 'reds' who have been agitating trouble throughout the country. Noland said he believed in free speech, but not when men were being urged to take up arms against the government.

If convicted, Newell faces a penitentiary sentence.

Government To Decide Shortly On Site For Carmel Postoffice

Within the next 15 days, Carmel will definitely know where the new $72,000 postoffice building is to be located, according to word received yesterday by Postmaster William Overstreet.

As revealed in The Pine Cone last week, location of the postoffice has dwindled down to only two sites, the White Cedars property at Dolores and Ninth streets and the Gould land at the corner of Junipero and Ocean avenue.

It is understood that George Rolfe, federal site agent who made an inspection of all the Carmel property, will recommend both sites to the treasury department. Each recommendation will carry the data and figures which Rolfe obtained during his survey here. Using this data, the final decision will be up to the treasury department.

Both the owners of the White Cedars property and the Gould land, it was learned, have materially trimmed their original bids to meet the demands of the government.

After the final decision on the purchase of the property has been announced by the government, work will start on the drafting of plans for the building. Architects who will try for the job, will forward their plans to the treasury department. The architect will then be selected by the government and will go to Washington to confer on the plans.

It is estimated by Postmaster Overstreet, that work on the project should start within 90 days at the latest. The new building, it is expected, will be ready for occupancy by the first of next year.

Final Zoning Battle To Be Staged in Salinas on Monday

Scenic Beauty vs. Commercialism
The Place: Supervisors' Chambers
The Time: Next Monday 2 p.m.

The final bout to keep commercialism from encroaching on Carmel's front door will be staged this coming Monday when the board of supervisors act on the probable adoption of the comprehensive zoning ordinance recommended by the county planning commission.

mended by the county planning commission.

More than 300 Carmel residents are expected to crowd the supervisors' chambers and be ready to give both "verbal and moral support" to the commission's recommendation.

The tentative zoning plan restricts for residential purposes virtually all property surrounding the village, including the Monterey-Carmel highway. Only two exceptions are made which provide for the establishment of a service station in front of the toll gate on Carmel hill and another by the bridge leading to the highlands.

Despite protests from two large property owners, the commission several weeks ago granted the request of Carmel residents and ordered the tentative zoning plan to be drafted. This plan will come up for adoption before the supervisors, and because of the possibility of opposition, leaders in the zoning fight, are urging a large attendance from Carmel.

"The hearing before the supervisors next Monday afternoon," Adolph Hanke, one of the strong supporters of the zoning plan said today, "will bring to a climax the fight we have been waging for several months to protect the scenic beauty of territory surrounding Carmel. It is imperative that we have a large attendance to support our stand before the supervisors."

Opposition from Paul Flanders of the Carmel Land company and Willis Walker is anticipated at the supervisors' hearing. It was learned today that both will file formal protest against any zoning.

What stand the supervisors will take is somewhat doubtful. The support of two of the supervisors has so far been promised—that of Andy Jacobsen and George Dudley.

How the other supervisors feel about the zoning question appeared uncertain this week. A majority vote of three would be necessary.

THE NEW "CARMEL DOLLAR," which goes into circulation tomorrow. Catherine Seideneck and Jo Mora, both well known Carmel artists, are responsible for the beauty of the new "Carmel Dollar." Mora did the "dollar" and Mrs. Seideneck the stamp.

First Issue of "Carmel Dollars" To Be In Circulation Tomorrow

"Carmel Dollars" will be placed in circulation tomorrow when some 20 unemployed men working for the city will be paid in the new village currency.

According to Howell Byrnes, chairman of the Carmel Business association committee in charge of the movement, $75 in the "Carmel Dollars" will be paid out this weekend and similar sums on the following weeks until the issue of one thousand dollars has been placed in circulation.

Virtually every Carmel merchant is behind the plan that is expected to not only stimulate business but to also aid the unemployed in this section. At a business association meeting Wednesday night, the merchants pledged their support and will accept the script as readily as money.

"The success of the entire plan," Byrnes said today, "depends on the co-operation of residents. The 'Carmel Dollars' must be kept constantly in circulation if they are to be of assistance. They must not be taken as souvenirs. The Business Association will sell later on the cancelled Dollars to residents or others who want them as souvenirs or to send to friends out-of-town."

The instructions for handling the Dollars are brief. On receiving the Dollar a 3-cent Relief stamp purchased at either of the banks is placed on the certificate. Each time the Dollar is used in a transaction, the 3-cent stamp has to go on it. When 36 stamps have been so placed, the Dollar will be redeemed by the banks on presentation at the rate of one dollar in cash each.

Federal Income Taxpayers

For the convenience of those who are required by law to file federal tax returns, Deputy Collector, A. B. Cavagnaro of the Internal Revenue Service, will be at the Bank of Carmel on February 20th and 21st to assist taxpayers in preparing their returns. No charge will be made for this service. The matter of filing your income tax return should be given immediate attention in order to avoid penalty and interest.

Carmel Girl Injured In Fall From Horse

Jewel Hodges, Carmel girl, was recovering this week at her home on Camino Real from injuries suffered when she fell Friday from her horse while riding through Del Monte forest.

A speeding motorist which passed but a few feet away from the rider, is believed to have frightened the horse so that Miss Hodges lost control. She was not seriously injured.

Firemen To Undergo Examinations Sunday

Members of the Carmel fire department will undergo rigid examinations next Sunday morning on tests compiled by the Board of Fire Underwriters.

The examinations will be given at Sunset School by Robert Leidig, fire chief and Otto Bardarson. There are 22 members of the department who will seek to successfully pass the examinations.

Those that receive creditable marks in the examinations will be given the uniforms that were recently purchased by the department.

Gloria Stuart, motion picture player, was in Carmel over the weekend.

Harry Wilson's Damage Suit To Be Tried Again

Once more, Harry Leon Wilson, famous Carmel Highland's author, must take the stand in the superior court at Salinas and describe the damage caused as the result of a fire which broke out just below his estate some months ago.

Because of inadvertence on the part of the defendant's San Francisco attorneys, the $9400 damage suit which Wilson brought against Meyer Rosenberg, highway contractor, will be tried again.

Wilson charged that Rosenberg's workmen carelessly let a fire get out of control, destroying many stately pines and picturesque ghost cypress trees which dotted his land and framed a picture of the Pacific ocean at his study window.

It was in that study that Wilson had been inspired to write such memorable tales as "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Merton of the Movies," "Lone Tree," and other books which won him an international reputation.

In court several weeks ago, his suit was uncontested and Superior Judge H. G. Jorgensen took the matter under submission for further consideration. Early this week, however, Rosenberg's attorneys said the case went by default because of "inadvertence and excusable neglect," they asked that the default be set aside. They had believed their client had been served with the notice of the action outside of Monterey county, which would entitle them to 30 days before answering. Actually service was made inside the county, which gave them but 10 days of grace.

Judge Jorgensen said that the default would be set aside if the defendant paid a $103.80 court costs to the plaintiff within 15 days. It is understood that Rosenberg's attorneys are willing to do this and another hearing in the case will be ordered.

Ugh! Big Injun's Auto In Need of Medicine Man

Tony Luhan, wealthy Taos Indian spending a vacation here, went native Friday night and "shot" up the town.

At least that was the belief of frightened patrons in front of the Carmel Theatre, who heard shots reverberating in the downtown district and saw Luhan running up the street. Simultaneously, tongues of flames came out from under the hood of Luhan's automobile.

A defective exhaust pipe in Luhan's car was the origin of the shots which developed into a fire in the engine. The fire department, called to the scene of the blaze, extinguished the flames before any serious damage had been done to the machine.

Three Residents Sued For Not Paying Counsel

Because they failed to pay their attorney for legal services rendered, three Carmel residents this week were named defendants in a $8250 suit filed in the superior court at Salinas.

The three defendants are Katherine O. Easton, Dortha A. Harter and Esther K. Easton. The complaint charges that they failed to pay their attorney, Russell T. Ainsworth of San Francisco. The complaint did not set forth the nature of the legal services involved.

Abalone Schedule For Next Sunday's Games

The games which were postponed last Sunday on account of rain at the two fields of the Abalone League will be played at the end of the season. Sunday's schedule calls for the following games:

Carmel Woods
Pilots vs. Giants and Manzanita vs. Club.

The Point
Del Monte vs. Country Club and Shamrocks vs. Tigers.

George and Ralph Riley were

If there is any question in your mind talk to the ablest business men you know. Get their advice and counsel. Every dollar now put in circulation will bring prosperity nearer. Keep it working!

Prosperity, as far as the peninsula is concerned, will begin to show its head above depression when merchants, lawyers, doctors and citizens generally begin patronizing local industries. By local industries we mean those established here; the ones who pay taxes, wages, etc.

Too much money, peninsula made, finds its way into trade channels in other cities.

We have a tremendous opportunity here to capitalize on the great scenic attractions of Monterey county. Of these great vacation areas it can be said: "They didn't cost us a nickel to produce, and they can be sold over and over again." But first we must be sold on the peninsula.

Sell the "Buy on the peninsula" spirit to yourself and family. Suppose the article wanted does cost a few cents more—consider your cost of going to and from the other trading center—consider your hotel and eating bill, transportation, and miscellaneous expenses.

On the average, every commodity is as reasonably priced here on the peninsula as in the larger centers.

If every citizen on the peninsula would purchase all his necessities in this community, prosperity would return in short order. Do your part. BUY NOW!

There is a vast amount of unadulterated bunk being thrown around the current discussion of "balanced budgets." There never can be a justification of waste in the operation of business, whether it be government industry or privately owned. We cannot make a case for useless construction just to make work.

Report of Red Cross Reveals Work Being Carried Out Here

Activities of the Carmel chapter of the Red Cross during the past six weeks indicate the fine work the organization is carrying out in the village, according to the report made today by Mrs. Virginia Stanton, president of the local chapter.

Over fifty families are being taken care of both in the distribution of food, clothes and medical treatment. In the past six weeks, Mrs. Stanton reports, twenty new relief cases are in the hands of the Carmel chapter of the Red Cross.

Through the cooperation of the chapter with the Sunset School P.T.A., free lunches and clothing are being given to youngsters. Pensions for two aged residents were obtained through the efforts of the Red Cross and one half orphan aid pension was secured.

Physicians are rendering free service when ever needed, Mrs. Stanton reports, and local druggists are filling the prescriptions without charge on the recommendation of Red Cross.

Private contributions during the past month amounted to $52.25. Mrs. Stanton is urging local residents to make contributions in order to carry on the work of the chapter during the rest of the year.

H. S. Crossman, treasurer of the Red Cross chapter reports that the local organization started the fiscal year with about $1200 less than they had in the treasury the previous year and the Red Cross is carrying a much heavier load than at any time in the history of the local chapter.

Youngsters Break Into Candy Shop, Take Sweets

Carmel police were this week looking for a group of youngsters who Sunday night entered the Romy Lane candy shop on Dolores street and escaped with pocketfuls of varied types of sweets.

Entrance into the candy shop was made through a back window which had been left open. Chief of Police Gus Englund who investigated, said finger prints found on the window indicated that the burglary was the work of small youngsters.

Mid-Year Number of Sunset Glow

The mid-year number of "Sunset Glow," the periodical of the local school, is an elaborate issue, with profuse illustrations and much interesting reading matter of the various activities. It is mimeographed, and each typewritten page is embellished with drawings made by the pupils.

Representatives from every class in the school formed an organization that selected the editor, assistant editor and business manager for the mid-year number. These, in turn, named heads for each department, and one period each day for two weeks was given over by these pupils to the work of gathering the material, editing it, and publishing the number. Students were given regular assignments, interviewed teachers and others, planned the layout of the magazine, and finally ran off the stencils on the mimeograph.

The class representatives and their officers were, for the Eighth Grade, Earle Dorrance, editor; Jean Thompson, assembly program; Barbara Briles, special activities; Warren Johnston, drama, and John Sheridan, sports. For the Seventh Grade, Roger Fulton, assistant manager; Dick Tevis, business manager; Spencer Kern, Bud Brownell, Billy Wheeler, Eugenia Fulton, Jane Haskell, Joyce Uzzell, Geraldine Kerner, Camille Burnham, Dorothy Dawson, Doris Crossman and Patricia Thompson. For the Sixth Grade, Betsy Panton, Jane Millis, Bob Farley, Homer Levinson, Carol Card and Leo Van Atta. For the Fifth Grade, John Plank, Richard Shoemaker and Ramona Cross. For the Overflow, Dorothy Smith, Alberta Holland, George Cook and Bobby Mayes. For the Third Grade, Howard Levinson and Elizabeth Watson. For the Second Grade, Pete Steffens and June Petty.

The illustrations were made by Dorothea Dawson, Gertrude Fo-land, Geraldine Kerner, Peggy Graham, Patty Ball, Doris Crossman Patricia Thompson, George Cook, Jane Haskell, Jean Thompson, Barbara Briles, Carol Card, and Arline Plein. The mimeographing was done by Bob Farley, Homer Levinson, Maurice Foland, Etta Castro, Edith Castro, Joyce Uzzell, Geraldine Kerner and Camille Burnham.

Escape From Prison Camp? Ridiculous!

Members of the convict road camp above San Simeon hear too many depressing tales from the outside world about unemployment to ever want to escape, according to J. F. Robinson, superintendent of the camp, who was in Carmel this week.

"Most of our men are well satisfied with conditions," Robinson explained. "In fact, I guess it'd be impossible to drive any of the prisoners away. Very few ever try to escape for although the work is hard and dangerous, it provides the men with out-of-door employment and there is always a waiting list at San Quentin of men who want to come to the camp."

According to Robinson, a central radio provides evening music for the prisoners and ear phones extend to each tent. Out of their monthly earnings, after camp expenses are paid, the men are able to save on an average of from $15 to $18 a month.

Members of the convict camp have for the last six years been engaged in working on the Carmel-San Simeon highway.

Residents Warned Against Bogus College Professor

Carmel and Pebble Beach residents were warned this week by Sheriff Carl H. Abbott against taking into their confidence a bogus college professor who recently fleeced a number of Santa Barbara residents out of large sums of money.

The "professor" who was reported to be headed in this direction, poses as formerly on the faculty staff from Yale and he contacts wealthy people whose sons are attending the university. He invariably claims to be acquainted with the students and after gaining the confidence of the relatives, obtains from them large donations for alumni work.

Register Before Tomorrow Night

All voters whose registrations have been cancelled or who have moved since registering are warned to register immediately if they desire to vote for school trustees on March 31.

Tomorrow, February 18 is the final day on which to register for the important school trustee election.

Besides those whose registration has been cancelled, registered voters who have moved from one precinct to another since registering must secure a transfer to be eligible to vote on March 31.

Pebble Beach Worker Given Jail Sentence

Morris Vallo, employed on a large Pebble Beach estate, started this week on a 25-day vacation in the county jail at Salinas.

Vallo, arrested by Monterey police on a reckless driving charge, was fined $100 when he plead guilty. Unable to pay the fine, he was given the county jail sentence.

Mrs. Smith and son of Burlingame are the guests of Mrs. Olga Fish over the week-end.

World Famous Cellist Will Play Seated on Packing Case

By Hal Garrett

Michel Penha, the famous cello list who gives a recital February 25 in Sunset Auditorium, will play sitting on a box. The only other celebrity I've seen play on top of a box was Ysaye, violinist and countryman of Penha's. In the great Chicago Auditorium he climbed on what appeared to be an enormous packing case placed in the center of the stage. In both instances the object was to reach the exact spot where the acoustics are most favorable to volume and tone quality.

Michel Penha found this spot a little above the footlights of Sunset Auditorium last summer, when his playing thrilled Carmel's largest concert audience up to that time.

I would rather hear Penha's recital than any cello performance in thirty years of concert going. And this is substantially the opinion prominent Carmel musicians expressed to me last August, when Penha's unaccompanied performance of a Bach Suite electrified his audience.

The first response was silence, then thunderous applause and cries of "bravo!"—altogether such enthusiasm as this village has expressed but few times in its history.

A week from tomorrow night Sunset Auditorium will be packed to the doors, partly because this year tickets are less than half what they were last for the season's outstanding musical event; but principally because the soloist is Michel Penha.

After writing the above I've heard Penha play his program. If possible it is more colorful and eloquent than last year's. Ralph Linsley will be at the piano. Penha's rare and beautiful-toned cello is a J. B. Guadagnini made two centuries ago. The first number on his program was composed a century and a half before that, and no doubt, played many times on this same cello fifty years before the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

There are more modern numbers, too, by such writers as Lalo, Saint-Saens, and others, comprising all in all a gorgeous program, and performed with a tonal and musical beauty that will linger gratefully in the memory of all who hear it.

H.M.S. Pinafore Will Sail Into Carmel Harbor

By Esto Broughton

"We sail the ocean blue,
And our saucy ship's a beauty;
We're sober men and true,
And attentive to our duty."

Thus launches "H.M.S. Pinafore," or the "Lass that Loved a Sailor," the most hilarious of all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, which will be the next opus of the Carmel Community Players bringing forth new musical and terpsichorean talent as well as dramatic under the direction of Galt Bell.

Opening on Washington's birthday at the Community Playhouse, the production will run from Wednesday, February 22, through Sunday evening with a special children's matinee on Saturday afternoon.

No pains are being spared to give the stage a truly salty flavor, Monterey harbor being searched by Dick and Rhoda Johnson for fit rigging and sail for the gallant "Pinafore."

Nightly an orchestra under the direction of Preston Search, favorite musical director on the Peninsula, rehearses with the chorus and musical leads. From the decks of the scenery ship new voices are heard and from the improvised orchestra pit come the notes of the community orchestra that is one of the treasured artistic children of this community movement.

Under the expert direction of Ruth Austin, who received her training under the famous Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, a chorus of "sisters and cousins and aunts" have been practicing the jigs and hornpipes, the sallies and the lancers, with which sailors are entertained in port. The costuming will be true to period, a local costume committee following that pictured by W. S. Gilbert for the original production in the Opera Comique on May 25, 1878.

Major Chester Shephard as Sir Joseph Porter, first Lord of the Admiralty, announces himself in song as "I am the monarch of the seas, the ruler of the Queen's Navy," but Major Shephard needs no introduction to Carmel audiences.

Nell Watson, who promises to be delightful as Buttercup, "dear little Buttercup, poor little Buttercup, sweet little Buttercup," will be remembered in the Forest Theater's production of "Mikado," another Gilbert and Sullivan opera, as well as the lead in "Hay Fever" and "King Dodo."

Carroll Sandholdt, the brave hero, Ralph, who though lowly born loves the Captain's daughter, is a real musical asset to "Pinafore" and Carmel. His radio reputation and popularity assure him of a large fan following when he pleads his cause "with hopeless passion torn . . . Our captain's daughter, she, and I that lowly suitor!"

What would a good old musical melodrama be without a villain? And ye trusty ship "Pinafore" has a black, blackguard without one streak of virtue, Dick Dead-eye by name. And "it's a beast of a name, ain't it?" And Gordon Knoles, who distinguished him-

The Devil Walks

By Herbert Cerwin

Nobody will ever want to pick a fight with Helen Ware after they see her in the picture which is now being filmed on the Fox lot in Hollywood.

Miss Ware has the genteel role of Pomposia—the weighty secretary of war to the famous ancient tribe of Amazons. In charge of the warfare operations carried out by her country, she has to swim rivers, lead the principal attacks and proceed in the conquest of the male.

She writes to her husband, Frederick Burt, that the script of the story is one of the funniest that has come before the candid moving picture camera.

Miss Ware leads the Amazons on to conquer the Athenians. But woman-like, they succumb to the blond-haired Athenians and when the dawn comes . . . the Amazons once more resume their wifely duties of housekeeping.

W. W. Wheeler of Pebble Beach, whose father, Judge Samuel Wheeler was a member of the original Lincoln firm, reveals an unpublished story that was typical of the martyr president.

Lincoln was in his first term in Congress and Mrs. Lincoln with her usual effort to climb into society, constructed a second story to their dwelling in Springfield, Ill.

When the session of congress ended and Lincoln returned, he looked in astonishment at the added second story on his home. Then he continued walking down the street until he came to the house of a neighbor.

He climbed quietly up the stairs, knocked at the door and inquired of the neighbor if they could inform him where "Mr. Lincoln lived?"

For some time, we have wondered whether we were just filling space with this column and if it was passed by without a glance by our gentle readers. Then several weeks ago, we happened to comment on the terrific drop in the price of erotic literature, naming some of the books and what they were selling for.

Several hours after the Pine Cone was off the press friends and strangers, telephoned, wrote and called in person. All wanted to know what publishing firm was selling books at the price named.

We were sitting in our car on Dolores street the other day, waiting for the rain to stop. Suddenly our attention was centered on a small, dirty looking pup that had apparently enjoyed rolling in the mud.

Then a weighty Amazon, sitting in her car, called at the dog: "Here Prince—here Prince!"

Mable Dodge Luhan, we are told, has written her memoirs of the past few years and has turned them over to a publisher—with the understanding they are not to be printed until long after her death.

Then there is a certain well known Monterey county newspaper which carried a head on a story reading: "Sow Wild Oats at Big Profit."

Anent That Game Refuge

Editor The Pine Cone:

Supplementing your leading editorial of last week:

A kind lady owning a cat and a bird-pool asked me to sign a paper petitioning the legislature to make a bird sanctuary of this section of California. I refused, on several grounds.

Do the kind ladies responsible for this petition, and the members of the public and semi-public bodies whom they have induced to endorse it, know that it is already a State offense to kill any wild birds at any time except predatory birds, nuisance birds, and game birds in season? And the open season for game birds is very short.

To one not opposed to any open season whatever for game birds, California now gives more than adequate protection to its bird life. The whole State is a very satisfactory refuge, thank you.

The net result of this proposed law will be, if passed, simply to penalize sportsmen for living on the Monterey Peninsula. Except for game birds, the situation here will remain exactly as it is. As a matter of fact, there is remarkably little indiscriminate shooting in the environs of Carmel, at least.

Who wants the pretty birds slaughtered? No one, of course. Not even the kind ladies who keep cats and own bird-pools which serve as bird-traps for the cats.

The house cat is the only menace to bird life that exists in this locality, and if the kind ladies are really anxious to save the birds let them petition the legislature to establish an open season for tabbies.

J. K. Turner.

French Mardi-Gras Ball To Be Given on Feb. 28

Arrangements were under way this week for the annual Mardi-Gras ball to be given in Carmel this year on Tuesday night February 28 in the Green Room of the Community Playhouse.

As in the past, the ball will be under the auspices of the local branch of the Alliance Francaise. Those who are planning to attend are urged to come in costume or in attire that will be appropriate with the theme of the affair.

The committee in charge of the event includes Dr. David Matzke, Miss Marjorie Pegram, Miss Glenna Peck, Miss Elaine Carter and Mme. Jeanne Pirene. Tickets for the ball can be obtained from any member of the committee.

Half of the proceeds will go to charity work and the other part to contribute to a French section in the public library and for the emergency fund of the Alliance Francaise.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by a newly organized Carmel orchestra called "Desperate Desperados." Several well known local musicians are members of the orchestra.

Library Report Shows Circulation Increase

A surprising increase in the circulation of books in the Carmel library is shown in the monthly report for January released today by Miss Hortense Berry, the librarian.

Four years ago 3149 books were loaned during January, while last month there were 7749. As the work of a library revolves around the activity of its books, this figure alone gives some idea of the increased burden carried by the staff, which remains the same.

On January 1st there were 2433 borrowers registered at the library. This being the year to begin re-registering, 1134 numbers were dropped from the files. Of this number 591 have already taken out new cards.

To help improve the service a shelf of pay books has been added. These are duplicates for the most part of the more popular titles. The curtailment of funds has made it impossible to meet the demand for many of the new books, so that this seemed the only way to give people what they want. The books may be reserved and are loaned for 5¢ a week.

Local Food Stores In Good Shape, Report Says

Carmel food stores, including restaurants were found to be in unusual good shape during the month of January, according to the report released this week by Earl Duclous, deputy county health officer.

During January, 45 local establishments were inspected by Duclous. Out of the three peninsula cities inspected by Duclous, Carmel, he said, had the highest percentage in inspection results.

Pottery Studio

Evidences of the success of the Carmel Pottery studio located under the Post Office building are now on display for sale at Etta Stackpole's on Dolores street.

Charming bits of tile-work and pottery have been made by the students at the pottery school under the supervision of Mrs. Gertrude R. Wall. Classes are held almost daily at the studio and an opportunity for beginners is provided for learning how to turn pottery and decorate tiles.

Book Discussion

Miss Agnes Williston will review and discuss "Rethinking Missions," at a meeting of the Federated Missionary society to be held next Wednesday afternoon at the Community church. All who are interested are invited to be present.

Wham! Or Is It Whiff! As Abalones Start 1933 Season

By Winsor Josselyn

"Abalone Baseball begins its 1933 season next Sunday!" (Rain postponed it last week.)

Here is an announcement that will make Carmel's pulse go double, as every man, woman and child has been waiting for these words from Abalone-in-Chief Charles Van Riper. The starting teams are chosen, the uniforms are issued from the League hope chest, the annual marvel of scheduling has been accomplished—

The Pine Cone's entire sporting staff, or should we say sports staff, put an eye on the practice during the week down at The Point diamond. Practice was also in full cry up at the Carmel Woods field, but unlike Gus Englund, we can't be everywhere at once. While the staff was unable to get the official line-ups (these are kept strictly secret until twelve hours before starting gun, for obvious reasons) we were able to interview some of the old-timers and get illuminating comments.

To make it fair, one question was put to all. "Well, how does it look to you?" That was the question, fair and square to each.

Helen Van Riper answered tersely and completely: "Swell!"

Said Richard Masten, radio artist, "How does what look?"

Harrison Godwin, the sculptor, replied, "Me? I'm just a stranger in town—a ringer on the team," while Dr. Slipner said, "Just wonderful, but oooh! my muscles!"

Charles Van Riper, burdened with League worries, answered, "Somebody handed me my glove, then somebody else took it right away."

James Hopper, the painter, said, "It's a young man's game—just my meat." Dr. Gray, questioned on this "young man" comment that is heard so much on the sidelines, opined: "After thirty-five a man can be at his best." (Thanks, Doctor.)

Franklin Murrphy, grocer, said, "How's that? Oh, I thought you were the scorekeeper." Tom Hopper, tree surgeon, came back, "Aw—well, if I must say something, just watch me sock this for a double." (He rapped a triple.) Charles Frost, racing driver, said, "It looks just fine from here," and at the time had his back to the diamond.

Paul Whitman, man-about-town replied, "Me? I'm out to lunch!" Don Staniford, the animal trainer, said "Fine! Reminds me of catching 'em alive in Africa."

This same Mr. Staniford, entrusted with the heartbreaking job of rounding up and maintaining a staff of umpires, insisted that we give the official list so that whosoever has anything to say shall say it now or forever hold his tongue.

"We'll have Judge John Thompson, and Tom Douglass. And there'll be none other than Frank Sheridan, aided by W. F. Thompson, Jack Orcutt, Dr. John Gray and—and myself."

Toss the coin and letter go!

Important Sports Note

The forthcoming Abalone Baseball Series will be capably covered for Pine Cone readers by an Abalone of the Abalones. This writer has known the League from the time that Charlie Van Riper could play short-stop and back up first base to boot, he was that nimble, and even the time when actors weren't allowed to play for fear of injuries.

In order that this writer might be absolutely fair to all teams, he has signed a contract with the Pine Cone to refrain from playing in the Series. While some critics may remark that he is all through and washed up and just taking this for an excuse, or that his bones are brittle, such is not the case. Neither are the action-incurred disabilities of a bum left wrist, a worse right throwing arm, and two trick ankles.

No, and again NO! Loyalty to his reading public.

I guess I know. I'm going to do the writing—what?

Steffens Speaks

Lincoln Steffens, noted Carmel writer, was the principal speaker at a district meeting of the Lion's club held at Hotel San Carlos Saturday night. Some 100 members of clubs located throughout the district were present at the affair.

Catlin Will Appoint Group To Study Postoffice Architecture

Within the next few days, Mayor John Catlin will appoint a committee made up of prominent Carmel residents, that will study and recommend what type of architecture should be selected in the construction of the new postoffice building.

Mayor Catlin said that he had conferred with George Rolfe, federal site agent, and received his promise that whatever architectural plans are decided upon by the city will be considered by the government.

The committee, Mayor Catlin explained, will investigate the situation carefully and pass upon the plans submitted by various local architects. They will then make their recommendation to the city council which in turn will be handed over to the government.

"I am anxious to see that Carmel gets a postoffice building that will be typical of the village and that will fit in with the local atmosphere," Mayor Catlin stressed. "By appointing such a committee as I have in mind, Carmel is certain to get an imposing structure."

As to what type of architecture is suitable for the postoffice building already has appeared to puzzle residents. There are too many mission style and Spanish types of buildings in the village.

Catlin feels that an architectural plan can be drafted that will carry more of the real Carmel spirit and will fit in with the local atmosphere.

"We're after a building that is different and one that the residents will be proud of," Mayor Catlin points out. "We don't want something radically out of the ordinary—but a building that can become a real part of Carmel."

Sunset School Notes

Health and Character Program

At the last assembly meeting, Seventh grade students gave an informal program based on their class work in health and character development. Two lovely songs by the entire class opened the program, followed by group recitation of: "Joy and satisfaction comes to the boys and girls who have good health; whose manners are those of a refined person; whose attitude toward others is one of helpfulness; who know the rules of the game of life; and who have a training or an education that prepares for complete living." With these ideas in mind, Jonathan Hatley, Bud Brownell, Spencer Kern, Roger Fulton, Billy Wheeler, and Teddy Marble, gave brief speeches.

A group of boys sang two songs of the range, and the program closed with the group singing "America."

New Student Officers

At the last assembly meeting, retiring student-body officers relinquished their positions to newly elected officers, each speaking brief words of encouragement. John Sheridan turned over responsibilities of president of Eleanor Butts; Billy Turner, vice president, is to be succeeded by Spencer Kern; Eleanor Butt's position as Secretary is being taken by Alla Osborne; and Bob Farley as Business Manager relinquished his position to John Sheridan.

He-haw! Couple Happy in "Funny Face" Suit

No longer does Mrs. Clarence Whitcomb make "funny faces" at her husband when he returns to their Carmel cottage after work.

At least this was the deduction made by Superior Judge H. G. Jorgensen this week when neither the plaintiff nor the defendant failed to show up in court in the now famous "funny face" divorce suit. The case had been dropped from the calendar.

In filing a counter suit against his wife, Whitcomb previously had promised an unusual court hearing on the charge that his wife, hearing him come home, would hide in some part of the house and then make faces at him. He said it was extreme cruelty.

He further alleged that she went to her mother's home on five different occasions after refusing to cook his meals and that she left the dishes unwashed in the sink.

Bringing the original suit, Mrs. Whitcomb charged he drank liquor, called her names and gave her earnings to his relatives. The suit was filed a year ago this month.

Pilot Sea Food*Reopens Saturday

The Pilot Sea Food, formerly Hageman's Marine Grotto reopens its doors at the foot of Fishermen's wharf this Saturday with a mammoth dinner dance.

George Vellis who is the new proprietor, has had years of experience in operating and popularizing this type of restaurant.

He hopes to make it one of the most popular and deliciously different places of its kind anywhere.

A banquet in honor of the Peninsula's notables and officials will be held at Pilot Sea Food some time early next month.

Dr. Wilson Davidson, Carmel physician, was in San Francisco on business last week.

Chuck Fuller, Carmel merchant owner of Cabbages and Kings left last week for his parent's home in Detroit. He flew to Chicago and plans to return by car.

Miss Betty Downing left for San Francisco to attend the wholesalers fashion show and will return with many new spring models.

IS THAT SO?

By Winsor Josselyn

Next time you buy a Pine Cone from the young ladies in front of the Post Office, look at them well. It is only a rumor—and we do not advance it as true—but we hear that they do more than just sell Pine Cones under their real names of Marie De Amaral and Joy Ballam.

They're Department of Justice detectives, we hear, stationed there to spot post office thieves, and already four robberies have been frustrated by their vigilance.

Don't quote us—and don't let them hear about it. Secrecy is the very soul of their effectiveness.

Tom Wilson, back Fording again, rises up in strong denial.

"I deny that I denied that story in your Denial Column. I mean, I didn't have anything to do with it. I did not say that the Humane Society sold to the butcher shops the dogs and cats that are left over from the Orphanage dining room."

He was a prominent merchant here in town, and a cold had driven his voice down into the bottom of his throat. We remarked that it was a pity he wrestled

Mrs. Karl Rendtorff, president of the Carmel Woman's club today announced her candidacy for the post of Sunset school trustee in the April election.

Services Held For Slevin's Daughter

Funeral services were held this week at San Carlos mission for Mary Utrilla Slevin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Slevin, well known pioneer residents of Carmel.

Miss Slevin who had been an invalid for many years had many friends in Carmel and her death was mourned by all who knew her. Mr. and Mrs. Slevin settled in Carmel early in 1904 and have since made their home here. Mrs. Slevin's sister, Mrs. Joseph O'Connell of San Francisco and Joseph R. Slevin, a brother of Slevin's were here for the services.

Leidig's Grocery To Be Open Air Market

Definite word yesterday confirms rumors of several weeks that Leidig's Grocery is to remodel and become a modern open air market of nearly twice its present size.

The meat market adjoining the present grocery will be moved two doors East, and the entire intervening space will be torn out and rebuilt. In this way operating space will be doubled.

Exact plans have not been released, and contracts have not been let, but as soon as details are complete the Pine Cone will describe them in more detail.

Convalescing from a successful operation at the Roosevelt hospital in San Francisco, Dr. Henry Hollison expressed his intention of being back in Carmel before the end of the Abalone ball season.

Melville A. Wood, brother of Kenneth Wood, local broker, along with James W. Dunlap of San Louis Obispo visited Carmel for the weekend as the guests of Kenneth Wood.

"Soul" of Steffens Placed on Exhibit

The "soul" of Lincoln Steffens was exhibited in Carmel today.

A composite sketch of Steffens as he appears in the imagination of John O'Shea, noted Carmel Highland's artist is included in the exhibition of his work now on display at the Denny-Watrous gallery.

O'Shea said he made it as a mask of Steffens, but the latter accepted it with pride as a "true picture of his soul."

Gloom prevailed the atmosphere around Staniford's Drug store during the early part of the week. It rained Sunday and "us umpires could not ump", moaned Doc. Its a tough life for umpires when it rains as the weather hogs the spot light for being raw.

Newberry's Authentic Autobiography

XXXVI

I agreed with Bertha that it was far preferable to sleep in the open air under our lonely pine than in the Sterlings' chicken coop. Our bedding-roll and equipment had been dumped on the lot from the stage, and we promptly began building a camp with the foliage of the tree for its roof. We had constructed a bed of pine needles, cleared a place for the cooking fire, and were making a dining table from the toolchest and some shakes when a call from the road stopped us.

"Hi, you Newberry's!" shouted George Sterling from where he and Carrie sat in the Devendorf buckboard, behind old Charlie. "Come on down to the beach for supper."

"It's a picnic," Carrie explained, waving a basket in the air. "We have plenty of food. Come to the Cooke cove, just back of you." And they drove on.

"This is a busy town," I remarked to Bertha. "I can see that we are going to be so harassed by its activities that we'll have no time to work. What with parties and picnics, building a house will be a matter of years."

"We will have to eat somewhere," Bertha said.

"Very well," resignedly. "We will picnic on the beach. Also, probably we will sleep in George's chicken coop."

"Not that! I draw the line at chickens! We will sleep right here."

We saw groups of people, baskets in hand, making for the beach as we cut across to the cove. It was evidently to be a large gathering of the population of Carmel. We wondered who were the hosts of this party. Later we found out that there were no hosts and no guests at these community picnics, and that they happened quite informally whenever anyone had ambition enough to send out the word. There must have been nearly two score people at this first one we attended.

Cooke's Cove is a dent in the coast line, irregularly edged by low cliffs, and it looks westward across a wide beach of white sand to the ocean. Protected by its walls from the breezes, it is the ideal place for beach suppers, and in 1910 there was plenty of driftwood at hand for the big campfire that made the night comfortable and cheery. Coffee was made in a five-gallon pot, and the contents of the many baskets that had been brought were united into a varied menu on the great spread of canvas that served as a table-cloth, laid on the sand.

We knew scarcely any of the people who made up the picnic, but that didn't seem to mar the party. Everybody was discussing the open-air theater project just launched, and an impromptu contest for honors in acting was held. Elocution was rampant, and vied with the surf's pounding on the beach. Afterwards, some of the party went in bathing while the rest sat around the driftwood fire and sang or told stories.

George and Carrie gathered us up at last, put us into the buckboard, and took us to their home, Bertha still protesting to me, under her breath, that she wouldn't sleep in anyone's chicken house. We found however, that the bedroom apportioned to us was as charming a room as anyone could ask for, and had been completely rebuilt since its days as the container of the Sterling poultry.

I had intended to be early on the job of house building next morning, but everybody slept late, breakfast was at nine, and before that was over a half-dozen people dropped in and organized a picnic to Point Lobos. George hurried down-town to buy steaks for the barbecue and to borrow Charlie and the buckboard again, while Carrie and Bertha packed baskets. We should lay the cornerstone of our home in Carmel next morning, but everybody slept late, breakfast was at nine, and before that was over a half-dozen people dropped in and organized a picnic to Point Lobos. I have built a dozen or more houses in Carmel and its environs in the twenty and more years I have lived here. This, my first, was so experimental that never, while I owned it, was it completed. It began as a three-roomed rectangle with a high pitched roof, and ended up with two ells, nine rooms and seven gables. It was first covered, sides and roof, with split shakes and wound up under shingles. It had first a single, big fireplace in the livingroom, and added two more fireplaces in the bedrooms upstairs. The house was constantly in a fluid condition of extensions or corrections, and whenever I received a check for a story, I would start patchwork on it. Handy and I did it all, carpentering, plumbing, and masonry laying. Nor was Handy a housebuilder by trade.

Through the first two months, Bertha and I lived under the pine in the open, camping out. The nearest house to ours—the home of Grace MacGowan Cooke and her two daughters, Helen and Katherine, with Alice MacGowan, Mrs. Cooke's sister—was far enough away so that our intimacies of life were not visible from the windows, but we knew of the scorn they had for the gypsy neighbors. The youthful Katherine, in a search for a lost kitten that had wandered into our camp, gave us an idea of how the house of my dreams was regarded by others. She was at the age of frank speech, and while personally she regarded the house and the camp as jolly, she knew from remarks made by her mother and her aunt that we were lowering the tone of the neighborhood seriously.

"Aunt Alice," she said, "thinks it looks like a cowboy mess-shack but mamma says it is more like a Georgia cracker's shanty in the mountains. Anyhow it will pull down the value of our property a lot."

"Were you thinking of selling?" I asked politely.

"Not until you started to build," she hugged the restored kitten to her. "But I don't want to move now, for I like your house very much. It is nice to look up at the ceiling and see chinks in the roof, like little stars, all around. Our ceilings are all tight plaster."

"Most ceilings are tight," I explained my system of building. "With a shake roof, however, you can't cover all the cracks. It is presumed that the rain will follow the grain of the split shakes, and dodge the holes."

"I wonder!" sighed Kit Cooke, gazing aloft; and

"I wonder!" echoed Bertha.

That next winter settled the reliability of my theory of shake roofs, and we lived through the rains with umbrellas up and pans and pots placed advantageously to catch the drip. We even slept under open umbrellas. But there was a long summer when we had no rains and no worries before winter came.

The building of the Forest Theater and its opening production of "David," a biblical tragedy written by Constance Skinner, was the most important event of our first summer in Carmel. We had become members of the organization, and Bertha had even been given a small part in the cast. I intended to refuse participation with the excuse of heavy labors at construction work, but had no opportunity. I wasn't asked to take part. But the gossip of the meetings and rehearsals came to me at the shack, and I followed the progress of the society with a detached interest.

Frank Devendorf had put a plot of ground on Mountain View avenue at the disposal of the society, and had assumed the bulk of expense of building stage and auditorium there. Rehearsals were not getting on any too well, and there were important roles still open in the cast. Professor George H. Boke of the University of California, coming home to Carmel for his vacation, had been cast as the prophet Samuel, and had immediately prophesied that unless a professional director was promptly secured, the play would be a frost. Over plenty of opposition, this suggestion was acted upon, and Garnett Holme, the University's dramatic coach, was employed to whip the show into shape.

Holme came, looked over the situation, sent for one of his bright student actors, George Man-ship, to play Saul, and began intensive rehearsals. Bertha came home from one of the early ones much worried, for Holme had told her not to come back until he sent for her. She was certain that the new director didn't appreciate her style of acting, and had taken this method of firing her from the cast.

Time, however, proved that she need not have worried, for a week later, a few days before the performance was to come off, Bertha had the word to show up at the theater that night for rehearsal. Helen Cooke, from the neighboring house of scorn, was playing the leading role, Michal, and Alice MacGowan was also prominently in the cast. Bertha went with them, each carrying a bit of candle poked through a hole in the side of a tin can, a lantern to see them safe through the woods when homeward bound. It was a time of by-paths and cut-offs, narrow trails through brush and among trees, with no assurance that one might not wander and be lost for hours in the scrub on a dark night.

Furnace heat for homes without a basement

GAS
HEATING EQUIPMENT
MAKES THIS POSSIBLE

IN too many homes a heating system that gives circulated heat has been neglected. Because excavation for a basement is costly or because homes have been built so that no basement has been possible, stoves and fireplaces have become the heating system for these homes.

Today gas floor furnaces change the whole situation for homes without a basement and homes that can never have a basement. These efficient heating devices, capable of keeping homes of from four to seven rooms to "Comfort Zone" warmth, can be quickly and easily installed.

Gas floor furnaces have established a record for economy in supplying small homes with furnace heat. The local office of the P. G. & E. can show you what other residents in your locality are paying for floor furnace heat. Phone your local gas appliance dealer or talk with a representative of this company today about floor furnace heat.

Natural Gas will maintain this Comfort Zone at low cost

The floor plan to the left shows a typical floor furnace installation in a small home. These compact heating units rapidly circulate an abundance of warm air and are capable of heating several rooms. When of adequate size and properly installed these efficient heaters solve the problem of circulated heat for small homes at a very low cost.

NOT A PROPER BATTLE FIELD

Mayor John C. Catlin is quoted as saying, anent the Sunset School trustee election next month, "Of course I believe in fights, political and otherwise, to clear up the atmosphere." Which is very good saying—usually. But there is something a bit different in a school fight, especially this particular school fight. The shrapnel shells and poison gas are hitting among the children. The damage of the battle is to the pupils of the school. We are fighting—or sniping, for it can hardly lay claim to the dignity of a battle—at the cost of the education of our children.

"To clear up the atmosphere" without injury to the school should be the effort of every true Carmelite. Three trustees constitute the board of Sunset School, and it should be possible to get an accord in so small a body without resorting to battle. No man or woman with children in the school wants factional disturbances at every meeting of its board. Harmony is essential to the successful handling of such an institution, and harmony will not come through a bitter campaign and excited election at the March polls.

It will come if the member selected at that election is of neither faction, is fair and impartial, has business and executive abilities, and has instinctive tact and poise. That member need not be an educator in the specific meaning of the term. He should be, through children of his own, in close touch with school affairs. He should be up-to-date in educational matters, not a quarter of a century or more away from his own or his adult children's school experiences. No matter how kind the red-brick schoolhouse was to your youth and mine, its day has gone forever.

E. H. Ewig is qualified under our definition of the needs for school trustee here. He is not a factionist, but will strive hard to keep factions from the board, and harmonize its workings. He is a business man with a grocery store on Ocean avenue, and is going through the same struggle with depression that you and I are facing. He will be economical with the tax monies, for he helps pay them. He will make a school dollar go just as far, and do as much work as any other dollar. He will handle school affairs in the businesslike way that he handles his own business.

PRAYER FOR A SAILOR

Let me sail the sea, the sounding sea,
Go down to the sea, in ships,
With a song of praise in my heart and soul,
And a prayer between my lips,
Down to the sea, the silver sea,
God, wash me clean of land,
And beyond the bars, and under the stars,
Let me forget the strand.

Let me forget the toil, the strife
Of a million men, at bay,
Let me forget the heathen horde
That gold holds in its sway,
And rise anew, on the boundless blue,
Reborn, with the birth of day.

Let me sail the sea, the surging sea,
Go down with the swaying mast,
Where whales sleep on the trackless way,
And white sails billow past,
And under the sky, where grey gulls fly,
God, make me whole, at last.

Genevieve Frazer
in Westward

THE BLACK SWAN

A group of swans were drifting down the stream
Reflected in the water's darkling gloom,
Pale as the ghostly figures in a dream
Or petals of magnolia in full bloom.

Cool and remote, they blent with ebbing day,
But one there was who did not share their pride—
A sable bird who turned her head away
And trailed behind, alone and bitter-eyed.

Yet she, in wistful beauty, of them all
Left the spectator moved, disquieted,
Much as the shadow from a garden wall
Strikes minor chords within the flower bed.

Velma Hitchcock Seeley
in Poetry World

Yet, having two children in the school, he will not let it down. Because he wants those kids to have the advantages of the best education a public school anywhere can give, he will keep Sunset School high up in the lists of elementary public schools. Economies will not be made at the cost of education. And he will remember that Sunset School is not a private school, but a public school.

RENTING BOOKS

Carmel's public library is being criticized because it has entered the rental field with certain of its books, thus competing with the private loan libraries. Five cents a week is being charged for popular books, most of which, it is stated, are duplicates of those on the free shelves. The idea is to offset the curtailment of funds for the purchase of current literature through a rental system.

Carmel has been very liberal with its public library, having one of the highest tax rates for this purpose in the state. With such support it should not be necessary for the library to go into competitive business. Nor is it good judgment to add another cause of criticism to the institution now. The library should remain a free public library for Carmel.

ONE BIG, FINAL RALLY

Another effort, and probably the last, is called for to put through the zoning ordinance that will protect Carmel's boundary highways from the menace of commercialism. Monday afternoon, February 20, at two o'clock, at the county courthouse at Salinas, the board of supervisors will have a hearing on the recommendations of the planning commission. It will be wisdom to have at that meeting a large delegation of Carmel citizens, enthusiastic for strictly residential zoning.

It will not be safe to assume that the planning commission's endorsement of the zoning law will carry it through the board of supervisors. At least three of the supervisors must vote in its favor before the victory is won. There is the probability that obstacles to the passage of the ordinance will be raised at this meeting. The backing of a strong delegation of Carmel citizens will help the planning commission make its recommendations into law.

People Talked About

Not all dogs know where to go when they're injured in accidents—but this one did.

Dr. David Matzke was talking to a patient in his office the other afternoon, when he was attracted by the scratching on the glass door. He opened the door and over the threshold, one of his Irish setters rushed into the office.

There was an expression of pain and terror in his face as he held up limply to his master his broken leg. The setter had been run over by a grocery truck in the down-town district and had made a bee line for the doctor's office.

With the aid of his office nurse, Dr. Matzke put the dog under anesthetic and fixed the broken bone into place.

"Art, after all is a by-product," said Maynard Dixon to the Was-

Newsletter in an interview recently. "A painter doesn't say to himself 'I will make art.' He thinks, feels, observes, produces something that may or may not be art, but which he humbly hopes will be. If artists would forget to think of themselves as artists and think of themselves as people, and of their product not as art but as something made for people, there would be less posture, patter and imitative painting. Why, after all, should an American painter, a California painter, think with a Frenchman's mind? A painting should grow out of the painter's own experience and express his own convictions, rather than out of an artificial movement originating entirely outside of his own environment." Dixon is tolerant of many "schools" when the painting is sincere, but he damns the imitative faddists, not with faint praise, but with big, round, sonorous damns.

Very few poets in this country have received the amount of press publicity that is accorded Robinson Jeffers these days. Himself, his family and the rock house on The Point are matters of interest to the public, and are given any amount of space in the newspapers and magazines. Even the great news services, Associated Press and United Press, send out to their thousands of newspaper correspondents, stories of the personality and characteristics of the Carmel poet.

Nearly all the stories tell of the stone house and its building, the enormous boulders that Jeffers handled, and the tower for his studio. The poet's isolation is frequently commented upon, and in a recent U. P. story is it explained as follows: "Privacy to keep out autograph seekers and tourists, and not seclusion from his friends, is the reason Robinson Jeffers, the poet, prefers to be known as a recluse, he disclosed today.

"Despite the popular belief that the noted poet lives the life of embittered hermit, Jeffers on occasions dines out with friends. He enjoys listening and talking over a bottle of wine—often until the early hours of the morning.

"It's not that I don't like to see people," he explained, "but total strangers are constantly coming to the house merely out of curiosity. Being known as a recluse prevents many a boring afternoon."

self in "The Streets of New York," has been elected to hound the true lovers, tattle about the elopement "at half past ten" and generally mess up the course of true love.

The right good captain is none other than Samuel Ethridge, whose playing in the "Streets of New York" and "Devil in the Cheese" earned him a place in Carmel's theatrical sun. Josephine, the captain's daughter, the lovelorn maid who prefers a sailor lad to the Lord Admiral, will be played by Frances Harper. Her lilting voice, her naive manner and general charm, are predicted to win her way immediately into the hearts of the audience.

Hebe, the Admiral's cousin and leader of a great contingent of "his sisters and his cousins and his aunts" will be sung by Theda Shoemaker, while Everett Smith and James Darling, who scored a success in "Streets of New York" will take the roles of Boatswain and Mate.

In the chorus, which will bring to the Carmel stage something new in the way of pulchritude and grace, are Glenna Peck, Charlotte Lawrence, Holly Smith, Pauline Meeks, Vera Hunter, Tiny Pearson, Margaret McKechney, Grayer Overly, Donna Davison, Edwina Pinkham, Lucille Sandholdt and Dorothy Pinkham.

Among the hale seamen are Allison Shoemaker, Howard Neubauer, Noble Barter, Rollo Harris, and R. M. Hollingsworth.

SPRING

Holman's Store Teems With Spring Offerings

Holman's is teeming these days with crowds who are seeking early Peninsula presentation of the newest offerings for Spring. Women's, Men's, and Children's departments are crammed with thousands of presentations that have been outstanding features at current Metropolitan Retail and Wholesale Fashion shows. And the prices, according to Mrs. W. R. Holman, are astounding even in 1933 when price has too often been overemphasized to the detriment of "Q" (Quality).

"It has been a point with us," says Mrs. Holman, "to feature price but never price without quality."

In the Women's department, particularly, we find such complete modernisms as the new mannish suits with novel checks, new necklines, and different sleeves as Paris and New York have dictated. There are the brushed woolen jackets, slipover sweaters, the new like this must be seen; it is too coats with completely original extensive, expansive, and altogether necklines and sleeves and pockets, er interesting to even brush in a the new hats including Neora few words. It is like a compacted braids, Bakus, and mannish Fe- Paris and New York brimming doras . . . and . . . Oh what's with beauty, enthusiasm, and mill- ing moderns who understand that the use! A women's department what they have come expecting to find is there, and to a greater degree than they would have thought possible.

"Dream of a color, a design, a pattern, or a mode. Search as you will, you are discouraged! At Holman's you will find it!" For as Mr. and Mrs. Holman say themselves, "We search and study every authority to bring to Monterey Peninsula an even finer service than is possible in most cities many times our size."

Judge Has Damage Suit Now Under Submission

The $5081 damage suit of William F. Thompson of Carmel against the Associated Oil company, Fred Leidig and Arnold Grimshaw which went to trial in the superior court in Salinas was submitted this week to Judge H. G. Jorgensen.

Judge Jorgensen, who heard the case, said he expected to return a verdict within the next 15 days.

Thompson charged in his complaint that an oil pit, five feet deep, was left unguarded at the Associated Oil company's service station on property owned by Leidig and operated by Grimshaw. Thompson said he fell into the pit on a dark night, sustaining broken ribs, multiple bruises and other injuries.
